When it comes to shopping for basics, one item that frequently pops up on many wish lists is a good leather jacket. In recent years, it's become the stereotypical uniform for models off duty and Instagram celebs, but it's a versatile piece, even if you don't spend time posing for a camera. Like any good staple, it can look completely different depending on how it's styled. With that in mind, the Cut asked five working women to show us how it's done. Scroll down to see the different ways a moto can be worn, along with more options, at every price point.
